Confidence Man Badly Wanted Saw Officers and Was So Badly Frightened That He Died During Night.

New York, Nov. 11.—When Martin J. Walsh, confidence man and bank clerk, was found dead in his home in the Sonoma apartments recently a death certificate was issued saying he died from acute indigestion and probably rheumatism. This was the first information the police had that he was in town. But the true cause of Walsh's death has become known, the information coming from members of the underworld.

Walsh had been in hiding for two years, or more since the robbery of the Cambridge, Mass., National City bank by George W. Coleman, an employee of that institution. Walsh returned recently from abroad. He had spent some time traveling in Egypt. Finally he was urged to come back, as no one was looking for him.

"There has been a change at headquarters," he was told. "They won't know you."

When Walsh returned to New York a few weeks ago under the assumed name he rented an apartment on upper Broadway and kept indoors. Saturday night he ventured down Broadway. He told his old pals that he longed for one real night along Broadway.

"I have been dreaming of the only place on earth where since I left here, he said. "Money is not everything, when you are away from the Great White Way."

While he was standing at the northeast corner of Broadway and Forty-second street Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty and Inspector Hughes happened along. Whether they recognized Walsh they will not say, but it is certain that Walsh recognized them.

"Walsh began to tremble the moment he saw Dougherty and Inspector Hughes," a friend of Walsh said. "He got into a crowd and jumped on a northbound car. He felt that it was only a matter of hours before he would be a prisoner. He told me he was so frightened he could not sit still. I know that Dougherty and Hughes will get me. They never let go of a case," he said to me. That night Walsh died. Fright at seeing the two inspectors killed him. That is the true story."

Soon after his return from abroad Walsh told for the first time to his closest companions the story of how he and Keltner and others came to rob Coleman of $200,000 which caused the National City Bank of Cambridge to fail.

Coleman, although trusted to handle millions, received a salary of $12 a week. He played in cheap gambling houses in Boston and in that way met Keltner and Walsh. They told him that they knew a fair dealer in a gambling house in this city who stood in with them to win the fair bank roll. Walsh brought Coleman to this city, and on two occasions took him to an alleged gambling house which had been fitted up for the purpose.

"On every occasion," said the informant, "Coleman just handed the thousand dollar bill to Walsh on the street. Walsh would tell Coleman to wait outside while he would enter the alleged gambling house to win the bankroll on the tip of the dealer, who was supposed to be in the game to rob the proprietor of the game. Of course, there was no play, and Walsh simply put the money in his pocket, telling Coleman he had lost and that he must hurry back to Boston and get some more. In that way they stole over $200,000 from Coleman."

When the crash came Keltner and Coleman were arrested. In Boston Keltner got eighteen years and Coleman twelve. Ever since detectives all over the world had been looking for Walsh. Walsh's body has been shipped to Boston.

AFFIDAVIT NEEDED TO RIDE ON TRAIN

Onkinston, Texas, Nov. 11.—Consideration of the railway passenger circuit here following the announcement that the enforcement of the game law requires that conductors refuse to carry hunters who have game in their possession and who do not have the necessary affidavit showing that they have not violated the law in the number of birds killed. That there may be damage suits against the railway for refusal to carry such hunters is admitted by railroad attorneys, but they say that the law on this point is plain. Shortmen point out that it will be practically impossible to secure the affidavits at many places where they will board trains after a hunting trip, but all conductors will be instructed to refuse passage to all hunters who do not have the affidavit.

Farmers, mechanics, railroaders, laborers rely on Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. Takes the sting out of cuts, burns or bruises at once. Pain cannot follow where it is used.
